Definition of a Wiki

A wiki is a type of database that allows its users to create and edit pages, present information, collaborate and link to other pages. Wikis make it easy to communicate online and are created for many different reasons - for Lifebushido Wikispaces provides a home and meeting place for people who work with or do business with us. Wikipedia is probably the most well-known Wikispace.

Lifebushido-Triangle Wikispaces are PUBLIC. Anyone can view and edit these pages. Users can edit every page they have been given access to using their preferred web browser. Unlike a regular web site Wiki pages change and evolve with the needs of their users. Wiki editors at Lifebushido are continually trying to improve and correct wiki pages as well as clean out old information.

Navigating on Wikis

You will find a number of links throughout the text on the Lifebushido-Triangle wiki pages. These links lead you to related pages and content. The links are set up by the author or editor of the wikipage who is often a Team Leader or Assistant Team Leader and will often open in a new window, or they may not.

How a wiki page is set up is at the discretion of the creator.

Searching on Wiki

A search on wiki is not an internet search. Most wikis offer a search function that will search within the wiki pages contained in that wiki. Lifebushido's wiki search function is simple—just type what you're searching for in the box and hit enter. The results will be a list of wiki pages within the Lifebushido wiki (not the internet).
